

Legal Planet has been nominated as one of the top fifty environmental blogs. To find out more and learn how to have input into nomination process and vote on the final selections, please go to the Lexis-Nexis website. We're very pleased to have made the initial list, given Lexis-Nexis's standards:

For the first time, this Community will recognize the thought leaders who share their expertise-and their divergent points of view-with the online world by awarding an honorary designation to the Top 50 Blogs for Environmental Law & Climate Change.

As many of you know, there are blogs, and then there are blogs. As we consider blogs for membership in ELCCC's Top 50, we look for timely topics, quality writing, frequent posts and that certain something 'extra' that keeps a web audience coming back for more. Our readers have come to expect nothing less, and we wouldn't have it any other way.
