

✖ LexisNexis Communities has named Legal Planet as one of the top fifty environmental and climate change blog sites for 2011. Legal Planet is one of four sites named in the Academic/Educational category. The judges had this to say about us:

“A collaboration of academic giants, this blog draws upon the resources and expertise of the law schools’ legal scholars and think tanks to provide insight and analysis on energy and environmental law and policy. The authors write about Supreme Court decisions, regulatory actions, and state and national legislation that affects water resource management, toxic waste disposal, renewable energy, air quality, land use, and more.”

Congratulations to the other winners, and to all of those involved in keeping Legal Planet current and relevant.