

Like everyone else, I'm sure you find fundraising appeals annoying. That's why we hardly ever do them. But twice a year doesn't seem like too much of an imposition, and this is a really important time.

In many ways, developments in Washington have been even grimmer than expected. So there's an especially critical need today for policy-driven research to help keep environmental progress moving forward outside of D.C. At both Berkeley and UCLA, we are working closely with state officials to help keep California moving forward. And there's also a need for reliable, evidence-based insight into the national situation. Our research programs at Berkeley and UCLA are dedicated to those missions.

- Berkeley. If you'd like to support Berkeley's Center for Law, Energy, and the Environment, click here. If you'd like more information about the Center, click here.
- UCLA. You can find out more about UCLA's environmental law programs here. The law school's Emmett Institute has a new, dedicated donation page here.

Thanks for your support, and for reading Legal Planet! We promise not to hit you up again till the days are at their longest next summer.