

I'm pleased to announce that the number of hits on Legal-Planet.org has just passed the one million mark. Before we switched to the new site in 2013, we had amassed over a million hits at our previous site, so the blog is now past the two-million mark since the blog was founded in March 2009.. That doesn't include the nearly one thousand subscribers who receive each of our posts by email. And we've even gotten into the formal law review literature with 165 citations, according to Westlaw.

None of which would be possible without you, dear reader. We'll lift a glass to you on New Year's Eve. Cheers!