Please excuse the shameless promotion, but readers in the LA area may be interested in an all-day symposium on India and Climate Change being held at UCLA Law next Friday. We're excited to host cutting-edge conversations about India's domestic climate change work and about how best to engage with India internationally, post-Copenhagen.

More information on the conference, including panel topics, speakers and timing, is here. The event is free but registration is required.