

We're pleased to host Professor Jedediah Purdy of Duke Law School as a guest blogger. Jed is an accomplished scholar and big thinker with a distinctive voice: in his own words, he is a "farm boy (providential laborer), high-country devotee (Romantic), law professor (progressive technocrat), and student of environmental problems."

We've had only one guest blogger before - Ken Alex of the California Attorney General's Office - who posted about energy policy, renewable energy, and energy efficiency last year. We plan to invite a few more guest bloggers for occasional posts over the coming year.