

As in past years, I've been collecting information about faculty openings in environmental, natural resources, and energy law. I'll update this as I receive more information. Here's what I've got so far:

University of Delaware is seeking a Distinguished Named Professorship in Energy and the Environment. Environmental law scholars are encouraged to apply (UD has no law school, but relationships with several, and has a Legal Studies Program). Expressions of interest by October 1. See <http://apply.interfolio.com/30840>. Contact: Jeremy Firestone, jf@udel.edu.

Osgoode Hall has two tenure-track openings, with sustainability in the top two subject-area priorities. Applications are due October 2. See the ad at: <http://www.osgoode.yorku.ca/faculty-and-research/academic-employment-opportunities/> Contact: Stepan Wood, SWood@osgoode.yorku.ca.

Pace Law School will be hiring a Clinical Instructor/Supervising Attorney for the Pace Environmental Litigation Clinic. Contact: Jennifer Ruhle, jruhe@law.pace.edu.

Vermont Law School has a tenure/tenure-track position in energy law and/or international and comparative law (with a preference for China/East Asia). Contact: Melissa Scanlon, MSCANLAN@vermontlaw.edu.

Tulane University Law School invites nominations and applications for the inaugural James McCulloch Endowed Chair in Energy Law. Contact: aaddis@tulane.edu.

Yale Law School is looking for an Associate Clinical Professor for the environmental protection clinic. Contact person: Douglas Kysar, douglas.kysar@yale.edu.
