

Law school clinics are where the proverbial rubber meets the road. They introduce students to the realities of lawyering. Often, they are a law school's most important form of public service. Environmental law clinics have blossomed across the country. Today's post provides a directory to the clinics.

There are several sites that promise comprehensive lists of environmental law clinics, but each list has gaps and some links to nonclinical programs. (And one is now a blank page). I've combined the information from the lists and added a few additional clinics. I'm relying on crowdsourcing to help me fill in any remaining gaps.
